Harper & Brothers "Cyclopædia of British and American Poetry," edited by Epes Sargent, will contain over 1,000 two-column pages, and will have many portraits. The selections from each poet of dis tinction will be prefaced by a critical and biographical notice of his life.

Professor Westerguard, whom The Literary World (Loudon) calls "one of the greatest authorities on the Sanscrit and Cuneiform Persian dead languages," has just died at Copenhagen. He was a personal friend of Sir Henry Eawlinson. His principal work, the "Zudayesta," is a standard book for all students of Indian literature

Some time next month John Wiley & Sons will issue a thirteenth edition, revised and enlarged, of "Wrinkles and Recipes," edited by Park Benjamin, and formerly published by Munn & Co. It will contain as a frontispiece, a colored plate, resembling the spect-rum, showing the proper color to which different mechan-ical tools should be tempered.

The first number of P. Justin O'Byrne's "Lyes of the Cardinais" has appeared in London. The plan of the work is to give, complete in weekly numbers, short biographies, with portraits and autographs, of all the cardinals who were summoned to the last conclave, or who may be invested during the publication of the series. Pope Leo XIII, forms the subject of the first number. Of his literary capacity the author says: "The turmoil of his time left him little opportunity for literary pursuits. An elegant Latin poet, his imaginative power found expression in Latin hymns-models of purity and eloquence, and of exalted feeling. No more eogent piece of reasoning will be found in modern Catholie literature than his reply to Renan's darling impeachment of the divinity of the Saviour, and our time has not seen an abler statement of the mission of the Church in the world than his now famous pastoral on the *Church and Civilization.'"
